S U M M A R Y

Clare Maxwell is a movement educator dedicated to helping performing artists have satisfying, sustainable careers doing what they love without injury and burnout. She teaches master classes in NYC, across the USA, and abroad. She created a Body Creativity Basics curriculum for actors during her five years on the faculty of the William Esper Acting Studio, and is also the creator of a body mapping practice that follows the evolution and structure of our central nervous system. She completed her training in the Alexander Technique at ACAT/NYC and certified with Jessica Wolf in The Art of Breathing after a 25 year career in modern dance. Clare was on the volunteer faculty at ACAT/NYC for 10 years and is an active board and committee member of the American Society for the Alexander Technique.
